According to this question: Dim myObject As Object Set myObject = Application.ActiveWorkbook 'add error handling for error conditions On Error Resume Next myObject.Close SaveChanges:=True'closes the current Excel workbook Application.Quit SaveChanges:=True'saves all the unsaved workbook On Error GoTo 0 This part fails: Application.Quit SaveChanges:=True'saves all the unsaved workbook According to MSDN: Save is the preferred way to save a workbook because it allows you to specify whether to save the changes in existing workbooks and which file formats to save the workbook as. That is the reason why I want to save (and not abort) the changes, but that is not the reason why the error happens. The same happens if I switch the 2 statements of saving and quitting. I've tried a few things like: On Error Resume Next myObject.Close SaveChanges:=True '
