If we did this, we'd have $(1,1)$ as $(1,0) + (0,1) = (1,1)$ I'd love to be pointed in the right direction. A: Try to find the representation of the vector $(1,1)$ in \mathbb{R}^2 . So you have $(1,1) = (a,b)$. Then you have $a=1, b=1$ And $(-1, -1)$ is simply $-a$ Krispy Kreme Now Selling 10,000 Daily Doughnuts Doughnuts chain Krispy Kreme is moving forward with its first foray into Europe, opening in the U.K. this December and carrying an ambitious plan for annual sales growth in Europe of 25 percent through 2017.
