Example: Use Notepad to add this line to a text file named "FontA": ArialIn the electrophotographic process, images are formed by charging and exposing a photoreceptor to form an electrostatic latent image on a surface thereof, and developing the latent image with toner into a toner image. The toner image is then transferred to a transfer sheet and then fused thereon. The fused toner image is fixed on the transfer sheet, for example, by heating and pressing it with a fixing roller. For example, Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2007-79080 proposes an image forming apparatus provided with a temperature sensor for detecting a temperature of a fixing roller, which is arranged in a part of a nip portion where a fixing member and a pressure member are opposed to each other. In the image forming apparatus, when a temperature detected by the temperature sensor is higher than a predetermined temperature, the fixing roller is heated with a heater or the like. On the other hand, when the temperature detected by the temperature sensor is lower than the predetermined temperature, the fixing roller is cooled with a cooling fan or the like. The toner image is fused on the transfer sheet by fixing at the time of image formation. In this case, when the fixing roller has been heated for a long time, the toner image is heated to be thermally deformed before the fixing roller is heated with the heater or the like. This deformation may cause a deterioration in quality of a printed image to be formed on the transfer sheet. The inventors of the present application have found that the temperature detected by the temperature sensor may be affected by a temperature at a boundary surface between a surface of the fixing roller and 80eaf3ab8
