I'm looking for a simple way to determine whether a list of items is a subset of another list. For example: l1 = [1,2,3] l2 = [1,2,4] l1 is a subset of l2 In other words, l1 should return True when comparing l1 and l2 A: l1.issubset(l2) This will take about O(n^2) operations (sorting each list, then doing an intersection), but this should be very fast compared to a series of indexes. A: You can use the all() function to check if they are equal: >>> l1=[1,2,3] >>> l2=[1,2,4] >>> l1==l2 True >>> l1==l2 >>>
