We are in a state of panic and Nigeria after a string of terror attacks and the kidnapping of hundreds of women and children even before last year's killing of over 200 girls in the school in Chibok that had earlier also been attacked in 2014 by Boko Haram. We are, very understandably still in shock by the brutal and cowardly attack on the school girls that happened on April 14, 2014. There have been other incidences of kidnap and women of Boko Haram have been killed to a certain extent, but to some, this may pass without much attention, but the kidnap of over 200 school girls has been an eye-opener and it has intensified the search to rescue the remaining hostages. We refuse to accept the surrender or surrender of the girls, and the harrowing stories of the girls haven't been published, with the full intervention of the military and the government in Nigeria, the terrorists have been carrying out their horrific killings with impunity.
